Interview with conformation judge Houston Clark for the 2014 National Specialty

What do you think of the overall quality of the Australian Cattle Dogs presented to you?

Although I thought the overall quality was exceptionally good, as in all breeds there are areas that need improvement.

Your top picks from the final cut in Best of Breed and the dog and bitch classes, what qualities about them really stood out to you as the best examples of the breed?

I thought they were all exceptionally good specimens of the breed because they were very close in many ways as good representatives of the breed because they most closely met the breed standard.

What trait do you feel needs to improve most in our breed from a conformation stand point?

In my opinion, this breed should be like a quarter horse in that they should have strong forequarters and hindquarters. Not in order, but I would like to see smaller ears, better toplines and a more compact dog. When Australian Cattle Dogs get too rangy, they lose their ability to be a good cutting/herding dog.

As a judge, you are faced with many difficult decisions when choosing the top animal in each class, what quality must the dog possess to initially grab your attention?

I look for proper balance starting with the head, neck, length of body and tail set. The silhouette should be breed specific. From that point, you then watch the side gait and hope that the ones with proper type hold that type in movement. Following that the examination determines the finer points of the breed i.e. proper head and strong neck with moderate to small ears and good fill under the eye; most important are proper bites with strong teeth and scissors bites. The examination determines whether or not the exhibit has a balanced layback of shoulder, level topline and a proper set of the tail.

What aspects of the dog do you weigh as heavier in your final assessment?

Soundness. If a dog is not sound with proper layback of shoulder with a balanced rear, he will not be able to do his job.

What poor aspect of conformation is a total deal breaker?

Very poor movement

What aspect of the breed has shown the most improvement since you started judging the breed many years ago?

The overall quality and consistency in type and size is much better than they were 20 years ago. The breeders deserve kudos for much sounder temperaments, too.

What did you enjoy most about judging this year?

What comes to mind first was the overall temperament as I only had two or three puppies that were somewhat hesitant about being approached for examination. Additionally, it was noteworthy that the overall quality of the bitches was better than males, which is important as they are the foundation of a breeding program.
