

Judges Interview: Steve Waltenburg, Herding

What do you think of the overall performance of the of herding dogs competing at our 2014 national specialty?

I thought the performance of the dogs was very good. It was obvious that the competitors worked very hard to get ready.

What trait do you feel needs to improve most in our breed from a herding stand point?

I don't believe it would be a dog's trait but training. Specifically teaching the dog to hold the pressure, Walk Up into pressure, and readily work Off Balance. Drill work, it's not fun, but it's effective.

What was it you liked best about your top scoring herding dogs?

The top dogs allowed themselves to be "Handled". They were listening for their Handler to call the next move. I don't mean robotic.

Negotiating a course or doing a chore on the ranch is the Handler's job to see it gets done safely and efficiently. Most the time my way of doing a job is better than the dog's, most of the time. So the dog must be listening for it's Handler's next command.

What advice could you give to them to improve their communication?

I was very impressed by the level of Handling at 2014 National, so keep Training!

What did you enjoy most about judging this year?

Being able to visit with the Folks I've know for many years and meeting new Folks I hope to see in the future. Also, I very much enjoyed the weather!

Judges Interview: Linda Bell, Herding

What do you think of the overall performance of the of herding dogs competing at our 2014 national specialty?

I think there some dogs and handler ready, some were not. The cattle and sheep were not easy, so the dogs that could do the work shined.

What trait do you feel needs to improve most in our breed from a herding standpoint?

Holding pressure. If a dog will go in and bite, that's good. But if they don't hold the pressure to keep the stock going the direction you want, it doesn't do much good. Some like to see a dog get in there and stir things up. It can look impressive to some, but if they dog doesn't hold the pressure after that, it's not really working

The overall teams, dog and handler, did you feel like they worked well together?

Watching a good run is like watching a great dance. And that's what I saw. They communicated. Each knew their jobs and they were able to work back and forth, giving and taking and able to adjust positions and pressure as needed.

What advice could you give to them to improve their communication?

For higher levels, no real advice. They know what they are doing and it shows. Some of the lower levels? Keep it up! It takes training, time and dedication to do this right. If you feel discouraged, don't be! Hard work will get you there.

What aspect of the breed has declined in your opinion?

I don't see dogs as hard or driven as they used to be

What did you enjoy most about judging this year?

I think I enjoy seeing people TRY! It's not easy but trying is the first step.
